SATURDAY MORNING

Por Judge of the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit. JOHN PITCHER, of Posey. WM. F. PARRETT, of Warrick. Prosecuting Attorney for the same .. JAMES SHANKLIN, of Vanderburgh.

The State Sentinel gives an account of a minister in charge of one of the Methodist churches in that city, whose conduct-if the statement of the Sentinel is correct-rivals in infamy that of any case on record. The Reverend gentleman is over fifty years of age, and has a wife and family; while his guilty associate is a handsome young lady, who has heretofore borne a good reputation. The Sentinel boldly asserts that the lascivious parties have made an assignation house out of the public grave yard, and have visited it on repeated occasions. Charges have been preferred against the Divine, and a committee of clergymen appointed to try the offender. We trust they will apply the Scriptural injunction " to shun even the appearance of evil," in this case, and take away the fellow's license. We are aware that ministers of the gospel are but mentempted as others-but whenever, by their conduct, they are incapable of saying to their congregations-"Follow me as I follow Christ," they are unfit for their position, and should be removed. The misconduct of one minister does more damge to the cause for which they pretend to work, than the laborious efforts of a dozen worthy men are capable of repairing. Ministers should be-like Cæsar's wife-above suspicion.

Subterranean Transmission of Sound.

We were recently in a mine, where the miners were driving a drill over half a mile in length through a hill-about one thousand feet of it being through a shaby sandstone. Two sets of hands were working at each end, night and day, and approaching each other at the rate of about six feet per day. The work is done by blasting, and the year. The Jews in this country seem the difficulty in engineering in such operations, is to bring the parties, starting at opposite points, together at the centre, in perin which no pretender or abortionist could succeed. As the miners approach each other, one listens to hear the reports of the other's blasts. The charges are small, not much larger than was used to load an old fashioned musket. The first deadened sound of a blast on one side was heard on the opposite side, when the miners were seven hundred feet apart; the sound was audible through seven hundred feet of rock, as the distance diminishes, the sound becomes daily more distinct. At two hundred feet, the sound of the drilling of one party is distinctly heard by the other, though it could not and progress to triumph and unite the conhave been heard more than double that distance in the open air. The workmen are now one hundred and fifty feet apart, and the operations of one party are easily heard

The drill is less than six feet square, and starting on opposite sides of the hill half a mile through, so accurate have been the engineering directions, that at the point of junction, the two sections will not be six inches out of line with each other. Mr Mints, the engineer, and Mr. Duslih, the boss miner, who have directed this operation, are plain, practical men, who can engineer a way more accurately through a mountain without a hole in it, than a pretender can across a narrow creek. Under the direction of a tipsy surveyor, these miners might have delved their tedious way at random through the hill and come out at points more distant from each other than at starting, at a cost to the owners five times of the work under competent engineering. The sound of a miner's pick can be distinctly heard by his fellow-laborer through a solid body of coal 150 feet distant .-When fifteen feet apart they can hear each other's voices through the coal. Miner's are often deceived and suppose they are within two or three feet of each other, and attempt to make a "break through," when they are fifteen feet asunder.

The New York Courier and Enquirer comes out in a two column article, denunciatory of the New York Herald, and more particularly against its course in reference to the Sabbath question. The Courier says four-fifths of the Herald's support comes from men who despise both the editor and the paper; and it thinks all men who would have the moral of the community protected, and the laws of the land enforced. should at once withdraw their patronage from Bennett's paper, and force him to

The Herald has attained its present importance and position by pandering to the depraved tastes of the public, and will not be only to itself, but the whole Union, were apt to succomb to any pressure that will be expressed with a force of logic, eloquence brought upon it now. The truth is, there is that in the public taste, that delights in reading all kinds of impure stuff, and the papers that have exhibited the most skill and tact in supplying nutriment for this morbid appetite, have been pecuniarily the most successful. The Herald of New York city, and the Commercial of Cincinnati, are living examples of this melancholy fact.

Bes Tire Indianapolis Atlas seems to be badly posted as to the names of our towns in the "pocket." The other day it said the " Bonnersville," (Warrick Co.) Democrat was out in favor of Joseph A. Wright for Governor. Bonner is highly appreciated in this section, if the number of his readers are any index, but his notoriety has been of too limited a length of time to furnish names for any of our towns.

Prentice says Capt. Isaiah Rynders, his own skin.

The Hebrew New Year. Yesterday was the first day of the Jewish New Year, of 5620- It was celebrated by citizens of the Hebrew faith in this city, at their place of worship, by their usual religious services. To them it is a day of joy and warm congratulations, and is observed as one of their pleasant and interesting annual festivals. The Israelite, published in Cincinnati, the organ of the Jews in the West, in offering its good wishes to its read-

"The past year gave liberty of conscience to the people of Lombardy, Parma, Tuscany, Modena, and Romagna; it witnessed the progress of constitutional rights in Prussia and Denmark, and the progress of justice in Russia, for which we, in behalf of our brethren, render thanks to the almighty Disposer of human events. The last year was one of uncommon persecutions to our brethren in Austria, Galatz, Odessa, Smyrna, Algiers, and even in the heart of Germany by Austrian rowdy soldiers, which every philanthropist must sincerely regret. principal event among our European breth-ren is the mission of Mr. Moses Montefiore to Rome, and the conduct of the Pope towards him-an event which will always stand on record against the Catholic Church, as a warning to all friends of progress and liberty, never to trust that church, whatever her pretensions might be. As regards political affairs, we have to record nothing of our brethren in this country, as liberty knows of no distinctions of man on account of religious creed. The fate, progress and happiness of our country is also ours, and we have enough cause to thank God for a year of peace, plentitude and growh. Several of our brethren were elected to various public offices, not because they are Israelites, but because they are prominent citizens; hence we have no right to re-

It appears there is a controversy in the synagogues, between an ultra orthodox party, and one of reformers, among whom are extremists on both sides, who, tunately, are impotent and few; but moderate reform, the Israelite says, is progressing rapidly. New congregations are starting everywhere on the moderate reform principle. The building of fine edifices to the service of the Most High, and the organization of Hebrew schools. have been the principal characteristics of fully imbued with the spirit of the age, and filled with a desire to push the world forward in its career of advancement. The fect line with each other; it is a critical job scarcity of Hebrew teachers and ministers is seriously felt, and appeals are made to the adherents of the ancient faith to supply the means for erecting seminaries of learning and colleges. The Israelite concludes as "We wish, to our brethren of the Old World, political liberty, and the reign of justice. We wish our American brethren a college for the promulgation of Hebrew learning, the education of Rabbis and teachers, and the instruction of our youth in general. We wish our Western brethren a home for widows and orphans, to be located in some central spot for all the Western congregations in great and glorious works of charity and education for Israel and humanity, in the name of God and truth.

So years roll away in the current of ages themselves, except the great and good deeds that rose in its bosom-deeds which out last time itself, and are the diadems of humanity. So man floats down the stream of time to land in the bosom of death, and leaves by dogs-had been kicked by a horse, and no trace of his existence except the footprints of noble, generous, or wise deeds, which he impresses on the heart of pros and the beginning of a new year, let us and it becomes an important question stand still and consider, what treasures did we lay up for eternity? what flowers did answer them conscientiously. This is the the day of judgments-which, according to tradition, takes place annually the first day of Tishri-New Year's day, this year, Sept. 29--when man renders account to himself before his god.

Hon. R. W. Thompson in Kansas. The following notice of Mr. Thompson's speech on the Pacific Railroad, delivered in the city of Kansas, while on a visit to the Territory, is from the Journal, of that place,

The Court House was filled, on Monday night, to listen to the Hon. R. W. Thompson, of Indiana, on the subject of the great railway to the Pacific. He was introduced to the people by His Honor the Mayor, and delivered one of the most effective addresses it has been our fortune to hear on the sub-

The speech was not that of a politician, or of an ambitious orator, but was rich with the eloquence, the logic, and the broad and catholic views of the Statesman. It was such a speech as is seldom heard in or out the dog was really mad. But, while we of Congress, breathing a patriotism above party, and embodying a comprehensiveness above section. He boldly took his position on the great central route from St. Louis, by requisite, if the dog were proved clearly way of the Pacific Railroad and the Valley of the Kansas, as the most eligible for all the interests of the Union, traversing the continent as it does, on the central line of population, production, and political power, and uniting by its radiations the interests of the extreme North and the remote South .-His views in regard to the future policy of and power, that carried every one with him, and made all feel that it was the true and only policy, not only for us, but the coun-We trust to be able to lay this speech before our readers in a few days.

The Indianapolis Journal mentions several changes that have recently taken place among the newspapers in the State.-The Lafavette Journal has been purchased of the Messrs. Terrell by Messrs. Luse & Wilson, who have procured a new dress of copper-faced type and will print the paper by steam. They intend making the Journal one of the best newspapers in the State. Dr. Drake of the Newcastle Courier has purchased the Daily Broad Axe office in Richmond. We presume Mr. Goode will now take the entire charge of the Courier, and believe he will put a little more of the Young America spirit in it. The Richmond Palladium has come out with a daily issue to provide an advertising after finishing his autobiography, ought to medium during the Yearly Friends' Meetbe hung, and the book should be bound in lings and the Fairs. It says its life depends on the amount of patronage it receives.

Communicated. Mr. EDITOR: Perhaps the temporary excitement on the subject of Hydrophobia, wil ustify another short communication on the subject, especially, since antagonistic views have been put forth, on apparently good authority. We believe that on a question of this kind, the duty of the philanthropist is not to attempt either to promote an unnecessary alarm, or to bull the public by false security; but rather to elicit the truth, and trust the good sense of the community. with the result. With this view, then, we will briefly notice the several articles published within the last few days, on what is popularly known as Hydrophobia; which is in technical language, more properly designated as Leyssa, or Rabies; hydrophobia, (or water-dread), being a symptom, and by no means a constant one.

In the first place, an anonymous article appeared in the Journal, written, as the editor states, by an intelligent physician, taking strong grounds against the opinion, that Sheriff Gavitt's dog was afflicted by rabies. The arguments of this article were certainly rather meagre, amounting to little more than the assertion, that it could not be a case of canine madness, in the absence of the water dread.

In the next place, we have a communication from Dr. MAGENNISS, well got up. adducing the best authority the case admits of, (Youatt,) to prove, that the symptoms, and post mortem appearances of the animal alluded to, point unequivocally to rabies. In this article the points are well made, and the arguments clear.

Finally, we have the communication of Drs. De Bruler, Pennington, and Casselbury, taking the same ground as Magenniss, adducing additional professional authority, and arriving at the absolute conclusion that the

We think, however, that an impartial and rational view of the facts of the case, will lead the honest enquirer after the truth, to a less positive decision. The symptoms of rabies, whether in man or quadruped, like those of most other diseases, are, at least, many of them, equivocal. Some essential symptoms may be absent in a genuine case of rabies, while any of the symptoms of this disease, may be present in certain cases, and yet the disease not be rables. Even the dread of water, which has been sufficiently remarkable, to characterise the disease in the minds of the unprofessional public, may be entirely absent in madness, and yet present in any inflammatory, or spasmodic disease of the throat, in which swallowing is difficult, or painful. The same remark applies to amnexia, or the refusal of the ordinary food .-So the swallowing of rubbish, or indigestible articles, in place of food, may arise from an effort to satisfy the cravings of hunger, when the swallowing of ordinary drink or food would be attended with greater pain. It gregations. We wish the spirit of reform | would be just as reasonable to assert that the swallowing of chalk, or mortar, or pieces of brick, by a chloratic female, proved the existence of hydrophobia, as to assert the same thing in reference to a dog, suffering to the ocean of eternity, leaving no trace of from any disease that would distort the natural cravings of the stomach.

It must be borne in mind that this dog had been greatly abused-had been bitten finally had been shot. Was it unreasonable then, that strong manifestations of dis perity. Therefore, at the end of the old ease should be apparent. By no means; whether these accidents alone, are not suffiwe add to the immortal wreath of virtue? cient to account for the symptoms. One may Such should be the questions addressed to say they are sufficient, another that they are ourselves, on this occasion, and we should inadequate, and neither party be charge ble with gross ignorance.

In the case before us, the symptoms of madness consisted of great restlessness, n disposition to bite everything, slight spasms, the swallowing of pieces of blanket, straw, wood and feathers: - the spasms and dread of water, however, being too slight to rely upon as symptoms. The signs that contra-indicated the presence of the disease, were, the dog constantly obeying the voice of his master to the last, the absence of slavering, and his having received injuries sufficient to measurably account for the existing symptoms; to which may be added, the entire absence of the disease in this vicinity. 一 化二甲基苯基二甲甲基基基 In view of such conflicting symptoms, how shall we arrive at a positive conclusion? We are free to say, it cannot be done. We are willing to admit, however, that the probabilities are in favor of the view that believe it would be the safer course for the community to act with all the precautions rabid, we insist that there are some remaining doubts, of this being truly the case.

She has also engaged two carriages for the purpose of taking the remains of her favorite to Mt. Anburn, for burial,

The socialists of New York carry their idea of equality to a singular extreme. At a meeting which they lately held, they refused to elect a president, because they would thus recognize, at least for an hour, the superiority of one man over another. It was with difficulty that they succeeded in choosing a secretary.
